AUSTIN CITY DIRECTORY 1872-73

A hundred years ago, S.A. Gray and W.D. Moore published the first Mercantile and General City Directory of Austin, Texas, "Containing an Interesting History of Austin, the Name and Residence of its Citizens, and Local Information of General Interest." It was printed by S.A. Gray, Book and Job Printer, in Austin. In the "Introductory" the publishers state that it contains about 1400 names, "and as six inhabitants for every single name is considered a low estimate, it can be assumed that the total population of Austin amounts to about 8,500." The compilers also stated that this did not include "the large colored population," as it was found impossible to number them or fix their habitations, except for a few found in commercial establishments.

Consequently, I have omitted the few listings designated by (col.), as well as those with no given name, strictly commercial listings, buildings, bridges, and governmental agencies, because our space is so limited. For information on these, anyone can call or write the editor (SASE, please).

Listings are left in the order in which they appear in the book so that the reader can enjoy the exquisite humor of the compilers' (perhaps unconscious) discrimination. Regardless of alphabetical sequence, oftentimes men are listed in the order of their worldly rank, followed by the women of the same surname, and lastly, people of color. For flagrant examples of this arbitrary placement, see the Evans and Hancock listings. Then in the Davis section, Reconstruction Governor Edmund J. is found below the colored floor boy of a livery stable, whose name was Tom!

Street Name Changes

In a letter written to President Mirabeau B. Lamar 11 Jly 1839, Judge Edwin Waller (the agent appointed to lay out the town lots) suggested that north-south streets be named for the rivers of Texas in their geographical order, and that the cross streets be numbered. The fancy of the poetic president prevailed, however, and the east-west streets were named for trees. In the late 1880s practicality conquered whimsy, and the tree names were changed to numbers (running north from the Colorado River, where Water Avenue became 1st Street) as follows (in alphabetical order):

Ash Street became 9th Street; Bois d'Arc, 7th; Cedar, 4th; Cherry, 16th; Chestnut, 18th; College Avenue, 12th; Cypress, 3rd; Elm, 20th; Hickory, 8th; Laurel, 26th; Linden, 17th; Live Oak, 2nd; Locust, 27th; Magnolia, 19th; Maple, 23rd; Mesquite, 11th; Mulberry, 10th; North Avenue, 15th; Orange, 22nd; Palmetto, 21st; Peach, 13th; Pecan, 6th; Pine, 5th; Plum, 28th; Sycamore, 25th; Walnut, 14th; Water Avenue, 1st; and Willow, 24th.

THE LISTINGS SHOW occupation and/or place of employment, followed by residence. The less obvious ABBREVIATIONS are: b.=between; bds.=boards; cor.=corner; n.e.=northeast, etc. To save time, I have omitted period after st and av, which are lower case.

NOTES FROM THE EDITOR

We regret that limitations of space and time (It took nearly 30 minutes to type each of these pages!) prevented copying every listing. Many interesting and amusing items can be gleaned by browsing through the directory.

One could make an almost complete plat of the City of Austin in 1873 from this directory, showing property owners, buildings, institutions, and even the two public wells (one on Hickory and one on Ash near Waller Creek).

For identification of the ministers, judges, and justices of the peace listed herein, we recommend Travis County, Texas, Marriage Records 1840-1882 by Lucie Clift Price. If the couple married in this county during that period, the book will also show you who were the wives of the men enumerated in the directory.

We were able to print this abstract of the directory entirely in one issue only because of the unusually swollen state of our money bags. We sincerely hope that this condition may prove permanent!

Queries and books to be reviewed are needed for the next issue.
